Please enter the following Abstract of the Disclosure in the record:

A dishwasher includes a device for placing pieces of silverware, which makes it possible to dispose the pieces of silverware in an easily accessible, compact, and careful manner in the washing compartment while keeping production costs low. The dishwasher includes a washing container, at least one crockery basket, and the device for receiving items to be washed, with the device being arranged on an exterior side of the crockery basket. The dishwasher has the advantage of requiring no additional tray for placing the pieces of silverware, thus reducing production costs. The inventive device for placing pieces of silverware is particularly suitable for use in a built-in dishwasher.
